Preparation to Succeed in College

I have adequately prepared for my intended major, and I am ready to succeed in the upper-division courses once I am admitted into the college. Firstly, I have prepared to maintain good attendance in class and other academic activities. Next, I will take advantage of the available school resources. I will frequently visit the school library, guest lectures, and writing centers to explore concepts further that are related to my major.

Other resources that I will use include career centers and computer labs that provide valuable and free information. To further advance in my major, I will make it a habit to visit my academic adviser. By doing so, I will obtain an expert opinion regarding courses and classes to take throughout the semester—thus assisting in deciding how to achieve my academic goals. Seeking expert advice will also allow me to familiarize myself with the policies and procedures of the college to avoid inconveniences.

Subsequently, I will maintain a balance of my time while studying for my major. I will plan my time to guarantee that I attend all classes. Every week, I will plan how to manage my time and certify that every day I have time for personal studies, entertainment, and extracurricular activities. Furthermore, I will set my individual goals at the beginning of each semester while studying. Through this approach, I will institute measurable and achievable goals. Setting objectives will make me motivated and work toward achieving them. In addition, I will make sure my work is organized while studying. I will achieve the expectations of my course, complete all the assignments before due dates, and maintain my record in both soft and hard copy.

In my upper-division coursework, I will develop a regular study time to facilitate my success in studies. I believe that being consistent is crucial to establishing a regular study time that enhances the maximization of results. Moreover, developing regular study times will guarantee that I remain disciplined and develop an efficient structure of managing my time and focusing on studies. Another aspect that I will adopt during upper division course is perfecting my study techniques to assist me in retaining whatever has been learned. I will continuously revise my study styles to make sure that I identify the most appropriate one that works for me. I will join various study groups so that we can motivate each other to be successful in studies.

Another aspect that I will perfect in my upper-division coursework is effective money management while in college. I have realized that managing capital is challenging, especially in school. In my course duration, I will handle money meant for fees, survival, and other class operations such as trips and printing of assignments. To enhance effective money management, I will make my budget at the beginning of every semester. The financial plan will include such aspects as food, books, entertainment expenses, and other bills. After making the budget, I will try to stick to it to avoid a wastage of funds and inconveniences.

Concisely, I will follow my plans to enhance success in studying my major and subsequent upper-division coursework. I will follow the professors' advice keenly and make sure that I obtain requisite knowledge and skills, as they make for the ultimate test for success in studies.
